REPUBLICANS AT KEWALO

Rousing Meeting Last Night.

NATIVES THROG TENT

Good Speakers Tell Them why They Should Vote for Sam Parker.

The Republicans held an enthusiastic rally last night at Kewalo under a big tent which was erected for the occasion to ward off rain. A Washington light suspended from the center diffused a glare of light beneath which sat a number of Hawaiian musicians. The troubadours furnished excellent music which was relished by the audience, composed mostly of Hawaiians. The following candidates were present: W. C. Achi, George R. Carter, Wm. Hoogs, John Kumalae, Enoch Johnson, Wm. Aylett and Archie Gillilan. Edward Boyd opened the meeting at 8 o'clock. The first speaker was John Kumalae. He told of the numbers of Hawaiians employed at the foundries and other places and urged his auditors to support the party which had given them employment.

George R. Carter followed. He said in part: "One of the future prospects of the islands is the investment of foreign capital which will be made in this country. Many enterprises have been introduced here by capital from the United States." He went on to show how necessary it was to have a Legislature which the United States would look upon as being composed of responsible men. The harbors were in need of improvement. The Republican party was trying to build up the country and the people should support the party which will provide good times and the appropriations necessary to carry out the needed improvements. The Republican party wants to divide up the Government lands into sections that can be sold at an old price which will give an opportunity for both the poor and the rich to purchase them. Only could these things be accomplished by sending Samuel Parker to Washington.

W. C. Achi followed Mr. Carter and said: "In '92 I warned the people not to cumulate the constitution which they were about to make. I told them if such an issue were carried out we would certainly lose our independence. They did not listen to me but called me a liar. The natives followed Wilcox and you all know the outcome. Today those same people who rejected me are doing the same thing again. The Independents say that I do not love my country. I tell you I am buying lands from every source and hold them in my possession and through such means I am able to supply some of you with work. This should show that I have the interests of my people at heart. Let me tell you such will be the outcome if you do not use your suffrage as you ought. Let us vote for one party, the party for the poor as well as the rich, and that is the Republican party."

Wm. Hoogs was the next speaker. He said: "I urge you to support the Republican party, that we may have good government and get everything we need. Let us vote for the Republican party which will bring prosperity and good times for all."

The speaker stated that the Republican party would see to it that the fishing laws which now permitted Japanese fishermen to use their small mesh nets, were abolished. At the close of his speech three rousing cheers were given for Samuel Parker and the Republican ticket, after which Wm. Aylett took the stand and made a short address.

Archie Gillilan said he would not have been a Republican if it was not a good party. For the past two years there had been plenty of work here for the Hawaiians and every Hawaiian voter should vote the straight Republican ticket. This done, the work would increase and their pay be increased.

Sanley de Angelo, a young man, made an address which took well with the audience. He said the Democratic party was not a good party for a workingman. The Independent party was a party without a name or a foundation. It was like a child without a father—nameless and homeless, and simply an outcast. Republicanism meant equalization. Men's skins, whether black, yellow or red, were equal according to the Republican platform. He asked the people to consider the whole situation, as they were yet children in dealing with political issues. The Republican party had done more for the laboring class than any other administration that has been in power. Although a stranger in a strange land and not acquainted with the candidates, from a political standpoint he warned the voters to vote the straight Republican ticket.

Samuel A. Hassel made rousing speeches for the cause. The meeting was brought to a close by Mr. Hauapu.

Blouin in Honolulu

The gentleman who has been selected to succeed Prof. Maxwell as chief of the Planters' Association Experimental station, is R. E. Blouin. The new chief is a Louisianan. He has been associated with government experiment stations since 1891. From 1891 until 1895 he served at the Baton Rouge station. Since then he has been in charge of the station at Audubon Park, New Orleans.

Mr. Blouin considers the agricultural conditions of Louisiana and the Hawaiian Islands to be very different. There they have a crop a year, but the average production is a little over a ton and a half an acre, while here the crop requires from eighteen months to two years. But then the production is heavier than in Louisiana. He stated he had not had very much conversation with Prof. Stubbs when he went on last September, as he was so busy. He said he should continue work on the lines laid down by Prof. Maxwell.
